

Stellar bars are thought to be major drivers of the internal evolution of disc galaxies, such as our Milky Way. I will discuss what numerical simulations “both tailored and cosmological” tell us about how bars redistribute stars radially and vertically, and how they therefore rearrange abundance gradients in spiral galaxies.