

I will discuss from an observational point of view the constraints that can be obtained from studying the metallicity and abundances of open clusters. I will show the limits and uncertainties, and what appear to be solid results.